Excerpt: .believe it was for her; and at length I bethought me of the thief on the cross, and that brought her comfort. The dawn was breaking when she died in my arms, her last words were Lord, remember me, a sinner. Ah, Sally, I learned a solemn lesson then. I understood the meaning of that text, Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord God gave me that poor girl in charge, but I would not take her, and thought only of my own inconvenience; and I would give much to live over again those years; but I trust she is safe, and I have got the forgiveness I did earnestly seek. Mrs. Tymon sat still looking into the fire as she ceased to speak, and Sally too was much impressed and very thoughtful. Mrs. Tymon, said she at last, God made you...
