Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 203 x 127 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Judas is a young schizophrenic man who seldom leaves his house, but he is befriended by an oddball called Tramplestone who offers a unique insight into his disorder. Rather than use pills to halt natural processes, Tramplestone reckons that Judas needs a mental apocalypse in order to break free from the boondoggle dominating his mind. A bizarre mixture of unconventional advice and Beatles lyrics will lead to Judas going on a crime spree. When there seems to be no way out of the violent spiral, Judas will find salvation from an unexpected source. * You know, the average person constructs fences in their gardens, but you and I, we cannot, because we don t have the right tools. Are you speaking of the garden of the mind again? Judas asked, watching Tramplestone as they walked below the sun. Indeed. And when it rains, our gardens become wet and muddy, but theirs remain dry because of things like patios and fences. But if it rains very heavily, for weeks on end, then their artificial constructions would be of little use. In fact, they would trap the water and everything in that garden would drown. But you and I, because our gardens have no fences, we would drift away. Tramplestone looked at Judas. Do you see what I m saying? No, not really. I am saying that when the flood comes, they will be trapped by their fences, but we will be free. That sounds rather apocalyptic, Judas said. Would you agree that a schizophrenic person is trapped inside a fake world? Tramplestone asked. Judas paused. Well, yes, I suppose so, in that we see and hear things which are...
