Book buyers expect to go to the store and find a reasonably adequate representation; they may expect to have mail orders sent out for books of unusual character or in special fields, but a successful growing business cannot be done on a hand-to-mouth basis. This is an elementary phase of business management, and yet managers are too HILE the whole country is turning to a discussion of the budget system and progress toward a national adoption of the idea has been made by the adoption in the Senate of a resolution creating a special committee to study the question, with instructions to report a definite plan by December 1st. it is to be hoped that those who see a value and benefit from such a plan will not apply the idea wholly to national affairs. A budget system in retail business is likely to be just as important in its own sphere. Such a system pre-supposes a thoro system of accounting, in which figures supply the basis for the plans for the months ahead. Can the store put out a special campaign of advertising This should be based on the possibilities as shown in the budget of providing for such expenditure. Can the store afford a large outlay for new fixtures The budget should show whether this is possible and over what space of years the expense should be charged. Shall there be a different delivery system, change in wage rates, change...
