

History of the World War

By Simonds, Frank Herbert

Book Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Vero Verlag | Volume Two: The Making of Middle Europe | "The World War, entering its thirty-fourth month, as these lines are written, has had three distinct phases, both on the military side and on the larger and more significant human side. The three military phases are supplied by the Marne campaign and its immediate consequences; the Russian campaign, with its Balkan episode and its Verdun ending; the Allied offensive in the west, which began at the Somme in July, 1916, and is still proceeding before Arras and along the old Aisne battlefield. I have striven to make this book an American comment upon a world war, and no one can be more conscious than am I of its limitations." [.] This is the second volume of the five volume series on the history of World War I. This volume describes the events surrounding the battles in the middle of Europe in an impressive and captivating way. With many details and photos of the war events, the reader is taken with at the time of the early 20th century. The author, Frank H. Simonds, was a living witness of the war. He lived from 1878 -...
